Peter Korn

Ever since he started growing plants, Peter has tried to understand what it is that makes a plant establish in the specific place where it occurs in the wild, and then translating it to garden conditions. He has travelled to numerous places with climates similar to Sweden to see how plants grow in their natural environment. The trips, combined with great curiosity and own growing experiences, have given him an unusual understanding of what plants want – no matter how specific their needs are. Peter uses this knowledge in his landscape and garden design with great success and gives regular lectures on growing conditions, creating habitats and naturalistic plantings. Nature is always his greatest source of inspiration. Western America, Caucasus and Central Asia is his favourite areas to explore. Peter has done several trips to the area to study the habitats to understand the plants and to get inspiration for different challenging projects.

2014 - Landscaping projects in Sweden, Denmark, Russia and France. Big naturalistic plantings, parks, meadows, roofgardens, green walls, raingardens, school yards and everything else that is challenging.

2016- Creating a garden and a nursery for our own landscaping projects, together with Julia Andersson, Klinta Trädgård AB.

2016- Collaboration with Butong. Planting all their outdoor green walls. <https://butong.se/>

2012 Wrote and published a book about understanding plants and creating habitats. Both in Swedish and English, Odling på växternas villkor/Giving plants what they want.

2002-2020 Creating a five acre private botanical garden in Eskilsby, Peter Korn's Trädgård.

2002 - 2016 Running a specialist nursery at Peter Korn's Trädgård.

2000-2012 Creating landscapes at the Botanical Garden in Gothenburg.
